A. P. A. Cannery Closed For Season

The Point Highfield cannery of the Packer's Association, has completed the season's pack and the cannery, except for the watchmen will soon be deserted. Owing to the light run of late fish the loading of the Star of Greenland with the seasons pack has progressed rapidly and weather conditions permitting she will start her long trip south tomorrow in tow of the tug Chilkat until the open Pacific is reached.

Local U. S. School Opened Monday

The Local United States Public School for native children opened Monday, Sept. 16th with Miss Taylor, successor to Mrs. I. M. Pusey, in charge. Miss Taylor is a Parks College graduate and has had experience in the work, having been in charge of the native school at Klinquan last year.

Price of Canned Fish Dug For an Increase

Within the past ten days there has been a better feeling among the fish packers, and they are looking to an increase in the price which it is claimed was started off at too low a figure by the combination of the big associations.

A late Tacoma report has this to say: The sale of canned salmon which has followed the naming of the 1912 prices, has been unusually large. Additional sales of fish over and above the quantity contracted for subject to the approval of opening prices have been far in excess of the orders that still remain unconfirmed or that have been turned down, and are far ahead of the expectations of the packers. Orders are still coming in at a healthy rate and packers and brokers now look for the entire pack of reds to be sold out in the near future. The supply of carry-over pinks was so large and the 1912 pack of such proportions that the trade does not expect the entire supply to be cleaned up for some time.

A prominent broker said yesterday that in his opinion there will be a good fair pack of fish in Alaska, but nothing excessive, and that if the present demand for fish continues as he expects, there will not be very much fish left by the end of the year, and what is left, he says, will be in strong hands. —E.K.

Alaska Work Of Geological Survey

The delay in passing the appropriation bill has made it impossible for the United States Geological Survey to carry out all the field plans for Alaska that had been formulated for 1912, but the funds that became available by emergency appropriations made it possible to dispatch several of the smaller parties for a full season's work, and others started for Alaska as promptly as the appropriation permitted.

In southeastern Alaska the Survey proposes this year to study the gypsum and marble deposits. E. F. Burchard, who sailed from Seattle about the first of September has been put in charge of this work and will visit the marble deposits near Wrangell and the northern end of Prince of Wales Island.

The violent volcanic eruption that took place in the Alaska peninsula in June caused the deposit of much material on the northern part of Kodiak Island and created great hardship among the settlers. In view of this condition it appeared desirable to undertake an investigation of this field. G. C. Martin, who was detailed to study the area, reached Kodiak on the first of July. Under the joint auspices of the Geographical survey and the National Geographic Society, he spent six weeks investigating the volcanic phenomena. His work was facilitated by the Revenue-Cutter Service, which furnished local transportation. On the completion of the investigation Mr Martin undertook a preliminary examination of the mineral deposits of the western part of Kodiak Island.

Alfred H. Brooks, geologist in charge of the Alaskan division of the United States Geological Survey, has been appointed a member of the Alaskan Railroad Commission and is now en route to Alaska.

Sightseeing Party To Big Glacier.

Capt. Johansen made a successful trip up the Stikine to Glacier Lake Sunday with a large party of Wrangell young people on the Duckland. The day was ideal for sightseeing and the trip was enjoyed by all.

Raft Breaks Light Extinguished

Goodwin's log raft which has been ready for the mill nearly two weeks broke up in the Wrangell Narrows recently and destroyed one of the lights marking the channel.

Spader There Like The Ducks

A. T. Spader, Wrangell's champion endurance Nimrod, who has been on the Stikine River Duck Flats for a straight month, returned to Wrangell Sunday afternoon. Mr. Spader had talked with no one during the month and believed he had lost his powers of speech except in the quack clack of the shore birds until he met Ole Otteson and Ansel Babler Sunday morning.

At St. Philip's Church

"Using the Church" will be the theme at St. Philip's Church next Sunday evening.

Progressive Primary Call Issued

The call for the Division Primaries of the Progressive Party has been issued and primary meetings for the purpose of selecting delegates to the Juneau convention, to be held on October 4th, will be held Friday, September 20th. The delegates are apportioned according to the Wickersham vote in the late election which gives Wrangell one delegate who will be selected at the Town Hall tomorrow evening.

Surveyors Return From Iskut

The party of Canadian surveyors under the leadership of F. S. Casey, who have been surveying the claims of the Iskut River Mining Company, on the Iskut river, returned to Wrangell Sunday. The survey work will constitute the development work for this year.

Moving Pictures As Advertising

The advertising value of the motion picture negatives exposed in Wrangell and vicinity by M. H. Crawford can hardly be estimated. Like other forms of publicity the results cannot be accounted in dollars and cents and when Mr Crawford has put his films before the public, this town will reap advertising benefits. When a prospective variety of recreation hunter has read of Alaska, and what one has not, he will miss no chance to see a picture of the life and scenery of the wonderland of his reading and the picture will create a desire to visit the strange but accessible land.

Since coming to Wrangell, Mr Crawford has secured some fine views of the town, street scenes, totems, Chief Shakes' house and a wonderful picture of LaConte Glacier in all its active beauty with bergs dropping into Glacier Bay full of floating ice dotted with a thousand seals.

But these are only suggestions compared with the possibilities. It might include scenes from the fishing industries in and tributary to Wrangell; the lumbering industry, logging scenes and timber; the west coast copper mines and marble quarries; the gold prospects here and on the Stikine. A film could be made from the Stikine alone showing the mining prospects, big game trophies, pack trains, dog teams river scenery, transportation and local outfitting and supply houses BUT, Wrangell has no commercial club or unofficial public organization to secure these pictures we must and should be contented with what we have even though we can believe there would be much advantage in the advertising.

Red Rice.

In Senegal red rice grows wild. The fields in which it grows are inundated regularly by the Senegal or by its affluents, and in measure as the tide rises the rice plant rises above the flood. The grain is very red and very dry and hard. It swells in the water and as it swells loses some of its rich color. It is very nourishing and requires no cultivation.

Good One Way.

For many years a man named Dutton was a popular conductor between Duluth and Two Harbors. A woman from Duluth purchased a ticket, a return ticket to Two Harbors, and then concluded to return by boat. Some months later she wished again to visit Two Harbors and presented the remaining half of her former ticket. Mr. Dutton looked at it for a full minute, then said, "I think this ticket is good for one transportation, madam, but you will have to ride backward."—Chicago Tribune.

Military Ignorance.

"The late General F. D. Grant," said a Washington official, "was once complaining in my hearing about an ignorant officer. He likened this officer to a certain Private Cheney.

"Where is Cheney? What the dickens has become of Private Cheney?" "So, he declared, Cheney was sought for one whole afternoon, but no tidings of him turned up until a comrade finally said:

"Cheney? Why, I saw Cheney about two hours ago. He was talking about going to get some gun cotton to sew a button on his pants with, and that's the last that has been heard of him, I believe."

A Mystery of Paris.

One hundred thousand dollars was offered in 1891 for the recovery of an American schoolboy, Webster Conkling, who mysteriously disappeared in Paris. The boy, fifteen years old, was on his way to the St. Lazare railway station in Paris in company with one of his schoolmasters. The master lost sight of the boy for an instant and, turning around, found that he had disappeared as though the earth had swallowed him. Conkling's mother, a wealthy widow, began by offering $5,000 for his recovery and then increased the reward to $100,000. The money was deposited at Munroe's bank in the Rue Scribe, but never found a claimant.

Ingratitude.

It was a very hot day, and a picnic had been arranged by the United Society of Lady Vegetarians. They were comfortably seated and waiting for the kettle to boil, when, horror of horrors, a savage bull appeared on the scene! Immediately a wild rush was made for safety, while the raging creature pounded after one lady who unfortunately had a red parasol. By great good fortune she slipped over the stile before it could reach her. Then, regaining her breath, she turned round.

"Oh, you ungrateful creature!" she exclaimed. "Here have I been a vegetarian all my life. There's gratitude for you!"—London Answers.

Altitude and Temperature.

The lowest temperature yet found in the upper air is below zero 119 degrees F., at an altitude of twelve miles, and this over Central Africa. At an altitude of six and a half miles in different stations could be seen to increase, and stationary temperature or a slight rise of thermometer occurred. The highest sounding balloon so far is 18.9 miles and highest kite 4.5 miles. It appears that at great heights some gas exists of great density, and this name for it has been proposed, "geocoridium," to correspond to the corona around the sun. At a height of eighteen miles the air is one-seventy-sixth as dense as at sea level.—New York American.

Huzzah.
Huzzah, or huzzah, is the oldest and most common exclamation in all languages.

Some Brief Epitaphs.
The following are among the brief and curious epitaphs seen in European cemeteries: At Worcester, England, the slab erected over a departed auctioneer is inscribed with a single word, "Gone." In Sussex the initials and date of the death of the deceased are followed by two words, "He was." On the monument of Charles the Great of Germany the brief inscription is "Ca-pulo Magna." The most remarkable is at Cane Hill cemetery, Belfast, where the inscription says, "Left till called for."

Stone in the Heart.
A Greek woman employed in the American hospital in Caesarea, Turkey, was stirred by a revival. She straightway asked leave to visit a woman whom she had injured and to whom she had not spoken for ten years. When she trudged through the snow three or four miles to ask her "enemy's" forgiveness her relatives were sure she had gone daft, but the next day when she came back to the hospital she said, "We made peace, and the stone in my heart is gone."

Famous Old Colonial Church.
St. Michael's, in Charleston, S. C., at the time of its completion in 1761 was the finest church edifice in the United States and one of the very few entirely of masonry construction, including the tower as far as the belfry. It now stands apparently as firm as the day it was dedicated. Work on it was begun in 1752. Like almost all the colonial churches, this one suffered vicissitudes during the Revolutionary war. Its rector was a Tory and was compelled to resign, leaving the church affairs in a somewhat chaotic condition. Materially it suffered through the loss of its leaden roof, which was removed to furnish bullets for the colonial rifles.—Argonaut.

Real Rubies.
"Most people are of the impression that the diamond is more valuable than any other jewel stone, but weight for weight the oriental ruby costs many times what the finest diamond of the Kimberley field will bring," said a dealer, who has lately returned from a trip to the East Indies. "For instance, a fine 11 carat ruby sold in London a few years ago for $35,000. An 11 carat diamond in the market would not bring anything like this sum. The smaller sized diamonds and pigeon blood rubies are not so wide apart in price, but real rubies are steadily in the lead in all gem markets."—Chicago News.

What He Thought of Reporters.
When Fred Kelly first broke into Cleveland journalism he was put on police. One night he was sent to a big fire down on the flats. A reporter named Brown was sent with him. The fire was a whale, and presently Brown disappeared. A wall had fallen, and Kelly was sure Brown was under it. He rushed to the telephone and called up his city editor.
"Say," he shouted into the telephone, "Brown is gone! He's burned up!"
"What's that?" asked the city editor.
"Brown is burned up, I tell you! He fell into the fire!"
"All right," said the city editor, hanging up the telephone. "I'll send another man."—Saturday Evening Post.

When O'Connell Refused to Fight.
There were all sorts of ways of getting out of a duel formerly, as well as of getting into one. N. P. Willis records a conversation with Moore at Lady Blessington's in which Moore defended duelling as "the great preserver of the decencies of society." He was condemning O'Connell for not meeting Peel. O'Connell pleaded his wife's illness and delayed until the law interfered. Some other Irish patriot about the same time refused a challenge on account of the illness of his daughter, and a Dublin wit made a good epigram on the two:
Some men with a horror of slaughter
Improve on the Scripture command
And honor their wife and their daughter,
That their days may be long in the land.

Literary Consuls.
Great Britain has had literary consuls as well as the United States. Charles Lever, the Irish novelist, for instance, was British consul at Spezia and Trieste during the last fifteen years of his life and was succeeded at Trieste in 1872 by Sir Richard Burton, the traveler, who wrote many of his best books there, including his translation of the "Arabian Nights," and died there in 1899. And one must not forget that most prolific but nearly forgotten writer, G. P. R. James, who turned out his three novels a year for about forty years, was British consul at Norfolk, Va., and died as consul general at Venice in 1860.—London Graphic.

Conversational.

Two of the churches in Wellington are located close together, and recently while some one was passing between the two churches on prayer meeting night he heard this spirited dialogue in song:

The congregation of one church was singing, "Will there be any stars, any stars, in my crown when at evening the sun goeth down?"

And the congregation of the other church, apparently answering the question, was singing "No, not one; no, not one."—Kansas City Star.

Why She Was Scandalized.

The young lady, visiting her aunt in the country, came in late one afternoon.

"Where in the world have you been?" asked her aunt.

"In the hammock all afternoon," she responded, "with my beloved Robert Browning."

The aunt eyed her sternly. Then she said, "If I hear of any more such scandalous proceedings I shall certainly write to your mother."—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Judge and the "Barmaid's Blush."

Judicial ignorance is generally assumed, but there are occasions when a judge is honestly lacking in knowledge. The other day a witness in an Australian court casually mentioned that a certain thing occurred just after he had a "barmaid's blush." Judge and counsel were for the moment "stuck up" by this hitherto unheard of phrase, but the fact was gradually elicited that it meant a drink compounded of beer and raspberry vinegar.—London Chronicle.

The Drunkard's Cloak.

In the time of the commonwealth in England the magistrates of Newcastle-upon-Tyne punished drunkards by making them carry a tub called the drunkard's cloak. This tub was worn bottom upward, there being a hole at the bottom for the head and two smaller holes in the sides for the hands to pass through, and thus ridiculously attired the delinquent was made to walk through the streets of the town for as long a time as the magistrates thought proper to order, according to the grossness of the offense.

The First Knitting Machine.

Historic mention of hand knitting is first found in the books of the time of Queen Elizabeth, though it is known that it was one of the arts of the Pompeians. The first machine for knitting was the invention of William Lee, who made application for a patent in England in 1589. On being refused a patent by the English authorities he departed for France and soon after set up a large factory at Rouen. The Lee machine, which remained the same as it was 200 years before, was introduced in the colonies during the Revolutionary war. A sharp Yankee improved on it and set up the first United States stocking factory at Cohoes, N. Y., in 1832.

A Strange Recipe For Acting.

Perhaps the most striking instance of voluntary hallucination is that recorded by an intimate friend of the actor Talma. Langlois states that the great tragedian told him that whenever he entered on the stage he was accursed by force of will to make his brilliant audience disappear and to substitute for them a house full of skeletons. The emotion which these ghastly creatures of his own imagination excited served, he declared, to give additional force to his own impersonations.

How Paul Jones Countered.

When the English government denounced John Paul Jones as a pirate the American naval hero neatly countered. He replied that he had looked in the dictionary and found a pirate defined as "an enemy of mankind," and, "as England was then at war with the whole of America, the greater part of Europe and much of Asia, not to speak of a bit of Africa, she in point of fact came as near being the enemy of mankind as could well be conceived and that England was therefore the pirate and not Paul Jones."

"America's Finest Flouring Mills"

WHY? Blend Flour

STRAIGHT Eastern Hard Wheat flour has its uses. But to get results from the hard wheat flour, it must be thoroughly leavened. The housewife finds this too arduous.

Furthermore, we're living in a labor-saving age. Yet, Eastern Hard Wheat flour has desirable qualities that cannot be overlooked in the production of the best breadstuffs. Bakers realize this, for invariably they combine flours themselves, made of Eastern Hard Wheat and Western Soft Wheat—that is to say, Blend Them.

But the two must not be mixed haphazardly, as the superiority of combination depends wholly on a proper balance. Before offering the public their product, the FISHER FLOURING MILLS COMPANY made exhaustive tests to determine the exact proportions of each flour required to produce the blend of highest efficiency.

The formula finally adopted, in actual baking competition with all other well-known brands on the market today, has repeatedly demonstrated its excellence. You get this scientific combination in buying
